Overview
Daniel Podair focuses his practice on white-collar criminal defense, government and internal investigations, and complex civil litigation. Dan has significant experience representing clients in investigations and associated inquiries with government regulators, including the US Department of Justice and the US Securities and Exchange Commission, relating to securities, antitrust, and anti-corruption issues. He also represents clients in complex civil disputes and advises on matters related to cybersecurity and data privacy.

During law school, Dan interned for the Honorable Richard M. Berman, US District Court for the Southern District of New York, the US Attorney’s Office for the Southern District of New York, Civil Division, and the US Senate Judiciary Committee. Prior to attending law school, Dan worked for a member of the US House of Representatives.
