Overview
Steptoe partner Philip Khinda has been elected to the inaugural fellowship class of the American College of Governance Counsel. The college is a professional, educational, and honorary association of lawyers from the United States and Canada widely recognized for their achievements in the field of corporate governance.

The mission of the college is to promote a high level of professional standards among governance practitioners and a better understanding and broader adoption of best governance practices within business organizations. Membership in the college is extended by invitation only to lawyers who have practiced law for a minimum of 15 years, while devoting at least 10 of those practice years focused on the field of governance. Fellows spend a substantial amount of their time in boardrooms advising directors in a variety of circumstances such as management succession, internal investigations, disclosure obligations, shareholder litigation, shareholder activism and engagement, and a broad range of regulatory and governmental matters.

For more information, please visit the American College of Governance Counsel.

Practices
Corporate
Crisis Management
Securities Enforcement